LEARNER DRIVERS MANUAL OR AUTOMATIC

All Learners are taught using a logical structured process that builds on their previous knowledge and experience. At Freeway we like to conduct regular assessments to confirm current development and adapt training accordingly.

Beginners are taken through a step-by-step guide that is entered on their pupil record to track progress and assess readiness for test. New novice drivers (those with existing experience) are assessed against driving test standards to identify areas for further development and bespoke training is applied accordingly.

A little before the scheduled driving test, pupils are taken on a mock test with a different driving instructor to simulate the exam. Faults are recorded on a driving test report form and the results are analysed together to formulate further training if necessary.

The cars are all modern and dual – controlled. All have air-conditioning and electric windows and fully adjustable seats and steering to make you as comfortable as possible.

The instructors are flexible and friendly and committed to helping you learn to drive. Lessons can be started from your home or place of work/college at a time convenient to you and rearranged accordingly.

Beginners are encouraged to take double or long weekly lessons to start with to make the most of the time available. (Initially your instructor will drive you to and from a suitable training site.) Novice drivers often find long or even single lessons more convenient and some times increase their frequency to two or more lessons a week. Before test, lessons are often arranged at different times of the day to expand experience of driving at busier times or at night.

Intensive courses are usually available and include test fees, though you'll need to have passed your theory test first. See our Courses & Prices page for more details.
