TOWING TRAINING

If you passed your practical driving test on or after 1st January 1997 and wish to tow a trailer that exceeds 750kg and the combined weight of the towing vehicle and trailer exceeds 3.5 tonnes you will need to pass a practical B+E test. This means in most cases towing a caravan or horse/boat trailer with a vehicle suitable for carrying this weight.

To pass the B+E test you must be able to drive at a consistent high level as with passing the L test. In addition you need to be able to uncouple and recouple the car and trailer, carry out a braking and reversing exercise in an off road area and have a good understanding of the use of additional mirrors and be able to carry out specific safety checks on the car and trailer.

Freeway offers bespoke training to prepare drivers for this test. As different drivers will have different needs depending on the trailer they wish to tow and vehicle they wish to tow with and the facilities needed to practice the off road manoeuvres, prices are quoted individually. Please call for further details.
